How Did I Get Here?: Idea to Invention

Mary Anne Obst BSN RN CWON CCRN

Necessity is the mother of invention. Learn how one nurse took her novel idea all the way to invention and patent!

What's in a Name or is the Buttocks All the Same?

Christine Berke MSN APRN-NP CWOCN-AP AGPCNP-BC

Buttocks, hiney, gluteal cleft: there are so many ways buttock parts can be labeled. Right lower buttock vs. right ischial tuberosity can be the same wound yet your facility can be tagged for multiple pressure ulcers. Isn't it time we all got together on what to call the parts of the buttocks?

Leg Ulcers: What Kind is This?

Retta Sutterfield RN ACNS-BC CWOCN

Why is this ulcer here? Are all leg ulcers treated the same? How does assessment lead to successful treatment? Find out how to put it all together to have great patient outcomes.

Skin Failure: What is It?

Diane Langemo RN PhD CWOCN FAAN

Heart Failure-- Lung Failure-- Kidney Failure—we all know these organ systems can fail. Can skin, the largest organ of the body, fail? Listen to the evidence and decide for yourself.

Fistula Management

Mary Anne Obst BSN RN CWON CCRN

Fistulas are the toughest of all wounds to manage on a daily basis. Hear from a speaker who is passionate about fistula care.

Nightmares on Wound Street

JoAnn Hager RN MSN CWOCN

These are the wounds that keep you awake at night! Learn how complex issues were treated by nurses.

Can you recognize different kinds of wounding? Can you teach your staff the difference between an ischium and a buttock? Can you develop a pressure ulcer prevention program so robust that you can begin to talk to your physicians and medical coders about Skin Failure?

The St. Louis Affiliate of the Wound, Ostomy and Continence Nurses Society invites you to join us for our annual wound conference! This conference will focus on the tough stuff in wound-care: more precise anatomy, pesky leg ulcers, unavoidable pressure injuries, and fistulas. Local and national vendors will be present to keep you up-to-date on groovy new products and services. Network with other WOCNs, make memories at the photo booth, and enjoy a catered lunch all while celebrating the unique style of the 1960's.

Wounds are often a clinical manifestation of a systemic disorder...
